I hope to see Pathways In Education – Las Vegas approved as a new charter school in North Las Vegas. Many students in Clark County face challenges that traditional schools can't always address. While this model may not be for everyone, I believe students deserve access to multiple educational options so they can thrive in environments that truly meet their needs. I fully support the approval of this school and the opportunities it would bring to our community.

Dear Members of the SPCSA,

As someone committed to supporting vulnerable youth in our community, I write in strong support of the charter application for Pathways In Education – Las Vegas. In my role in the local non-profit sector, I've worked closely with individuals and families experiencing food insecurity, housing instability, and other barriers that often prevent students from thriving in traditional educational environments.

Pathways offers more than just academic instruction—it provides a flexible, personalized, and compassionate model that meets students where they are. By integrating individualized learning plans, mental health supports, and flexible scheduling, Pathways demonstrates a deep understanding of the unique challenges many young people face today.

I have seen that when students' basic needs are met—when they are supported, understood, and given a safe space to grow—they are more likely to remain in school and work toward long-term success. Pathways embodies this holistic approach, creating a foundation that fosters both educational achievement and personal stability.

I respectfully urge the SPCSA to approve this application. Pathways would be a powerful addition to our community, giving students who have been underserved or overlooked a real opportunity to succeed.

Sincerely,
Cynthia Lewis
The Just One Project

Dear Nevada Charter Authority,

I believe Pathways In Education-Las Vegas will fill a crucial gap in our educational system by offering a unique program targeted to students who may have otherwise dropped out. For too long, many young people have lacked access to the kind of flexible, supportive, and personalized education that meets them where they are—both academically and personally.

Pathways-Las Vegas is designed to do just that, providing an inclusive learning environment that not only helps students recover credits and stay on track to graduate, but also equips them with the skills needed to navigate the challenges of the 21st century. Through individualized learning plans, real-world experiences, and strong teacher-student relationships, the school is setting students up for long-term success—whether in college, career, or community life.

This is more than just an alternative education option; it's an essential investment in the future of our city, giving underserved students the opportunity to reach their full potential and contribute meaningfully to society.

As an educator with deep roots in Las Vegas and a background in both psychology and education, I've dedicated my career to supporting the young people who need us most—first-generation students, youth experiencing housing instability, and those finding their way through the often overwhelming postsecondary journey. This work is not just my profession, it's my purpose.

I believe every student deserves access to an education that sees them, supports them, and helps them believe in what's possible. That's why I'm so inspired by Pathways In Education—Las Vegas. Their focus on personalized instruction and real-world learning is exactly the kind of approach that can change lives.

Our community needs more schools like this—places that understand students as individuals and meet them where they are. I truly believe Pathways will be a powerful addition to our educational landscape.

Please, grant them your approval. Our students are counting on us to create more pathways to opportunity.

As a parent, I strongly support the approval of Pathways In Education – Las Vegas. My child has faced challenges in most of our local schools, and I know firsthand how important it is to have options for school that are flexible and student centered. Pathways provides exactly that.

This school seems to understand that every student learns differently. They don't just focus on academics—they invest in the whole student, helping them build confidence, set goals, and make progress at a pace that works for them. For families like mine, this approach makes all the difference.

Las Vegas needs schools that meet students where they are and help them reach where they want to go. Please approve this charter and give more students in our community the chance to succeed.

As someone who works closely with families in the Las Vegas community, I see every day the need for more high school options that are different from what we have. That's why I fully support the approval of Pathways In Education – Las Vegas.

Many young people in our community face barriers that make it difficult to thrive in regular school settings—whether it's due to lack of housing, the need to work, or personal challenges.

Approving this school would expand opportunities for some of our most underserved youth and provide a critical resource to families who need options. It's a step in the right direction for our city, and I urge you to give Pathways the chance to serve our students.

I have worked under the Pathways

Organization in past years and now as a resident in Las Vegas and working in CCSD, I can surely say that our children can benefit from another avenue on how they can accomplish their path toward graduation and finish their education. As a Coach and Admin Assistant, we have students who struggle, Pathways is another vital avenue in California that gives students a way to finish the first step to their further. Pathways can ensure that any student who chooses to enroll, will be able to complete their goals to graduate and add to our State's graduation rate. Alternative education programs are needed. We have students who are falling in the crack for whatever their circumstances and are missing other ways to complete their high school diploma. We need to care about our students, we have students who need another way to finish their education. Pathways helps those students find success and feel the ability to accomplish their goal and graduate with an accredited high school diploma. Pathways brings that ability and synergy to the Valley.
